Amy M. Bowers is a business litigator with wide-ranging experience in complex commercial matters, including international litigation. Amy represents clients in complex disputes spanning multiple jurisdictions and involving parallel proceedings. She has advised local and international companies in the manufacturing, wholesale, retail, and health care industries at all stages of litigation.

Amy has extensive experience drafting dispositive motions and appellate filings, as well as providing trial support during all stages of litigation, including pretrial and post-trial motion practice and supplementary proceedings. She also advises international and domestic clients seeking discovery, or objecting to applications for discovery, served under 28 U.S.C. § 1782 in federal courts around the country. Amy has achieved multimillion-dollar settlements for corporate plaintiffs in cases involving antitrust and unfair competition claims.

As a professor of advanced legal writing at Florida International University College of Law, Amy's scholarship focuses on drafting effective dispositive motions and accompanying legal memoranda. She is also the chair of the Quality Control Committee of the Miami-Dade chapter of the Florida Association for Women Lawyers.
